PREFACE

SOME fifty years ago, there was hardly a large house in Paris which did not contain a picture gallery of real merit. The French inheritance laws, which compel a father to divide equally his estate among his several children, have gradually worked havoc with practically all the larger Parisian art collections. Many have been bequeathed to public institutions; but many more have been dispersed by auction or divided after the owner's death. New collections have been gathered, only to be broken up again. It would be difficult to name more than a very few private art collections dating back even to 1870. One of the last to be brought before the public is that of the Comtesse de la Béraudière, which will soon be auctioned in New York.

The family of de la Béraudière is of the most ancient and distinguished of Western France. As early as the twelfth century it appears in Aquitaine; in 1190 Jean de la Béraudière, knight, took part in the Third Crusade, if we are to believe a charter preserved in the family archives, which was produced in the early nineteenth century to justify the insertion of his name in the great list of Crusaders at Versailles.

From the thirteenth century to the present day, the family genealogy is fully established, dating from Louis de la Béraudière, who died in 1252. The long list includes many distinguished noblemen of Poitou and Anjou, such as Eustache de la Béraudière, a councillor of King Louis XI (1477), Philippe de la Béraudière (married 1656), one of the heroes of the Fronde, Gabriel-Hardy de la Béraudière, who fought at Rosbach (1757), his brother Jacques-Marie-François, whose wife and daughter died in prison during the Terreur and whose four sons fought in the Royalist army during the Revolution. The fourth of these was the father of the great collector Jacques-Victor, Comte de la Béraudière (1808-1884).

The Comte de la Béraudière was one of the great French collectors of the nineteenth century. From 1850 to 1880, he continually added by his purchases to the numerous works of art he had inherited from his ancestors. He filled with pictures and furniture, not only the old château of Bouzillé, near Angers, owned by the de la Béraudière family since the early seventeenth century, but also his two large Paris houses, in the rue de Poitiers and the rue Monsieur, both on the aristocratic left bank of the Seine in the venerable Faubourg Saint-Germain.

He married in 1843 Mademoiselle de Beaussier; after her death, legal formalities compelled him to sell by auction part of her property (Paris, March 31, 1864), including the magnificent eighteenth century furniture and the Four Elements, four large canvases by Lagrenée, which were sold for a high price.

An intimate friend, Prince J. L., wrote of him in 1882: "Assuredly the Comte de la Béraudière has given proof of a most exquisite taste; for the last twenty years I have seen him passionately devoted to his favorite hobby and I can testify to his experienced eye and reliable judgment. How often have I not seen him refuse to purchase pictures which other collectors would have fought for, merely because they had some slight defect or because the subject was not sufficiently pleasing. For the Comte de la Béraudière was one of the earliest to recognize the full merits of that graceful French school now so universally appreciated."

Shortly before his death, the Comte de la Béraudière decided to give up his town residence and to reside thenceforth in the country. On June 2, 1882, he sold by auction twenty-one French eighteenth century paintings, mainly portraits; on April 16, 1883, he parted with his large collection of old master drawings, ably described by Paul Leroi in an article of L'Art, in which he enthusiastically expounded the Comte de la Béraudière's merits as a collector: "The man in France we all claim as our master in questions of taste, the most reliable, the most delicate, the most refined of judges, the person I have repeatedly pointed out to my readers as the champion of the purest, the most elegant, the most charming and also the most severe traditions, a true pattern of the connoisseur, whose solid but never pedantic knowledge is on every occasion supplemented by that master quality, le flair, without which no man can hope to become a connoisseur. And did he not begin to collect in his very youth, this great collector whose unflagging perseverance never stopped a single day and who, true to his early pursuits, saw age increase his enlightened fanaticism for the art treasures of bygone ages."

Is it surprising that, when after the Comte de la Béraudière's death his vast collections of paintings and works of art came under the hammer (May 18, 1885), the sale was one of the great events in the annals of French auctions? It took place in the la Béraudière mansion, 12 rue de Poitiers, and lasted no less than eleven days. Baron Jérôme Pichon wrote an eloquent preface for the catalogue, in which he called the Comte de la Béraudière "his master, his chief, and his King", recalling his taste, knowledge and judgment, mentioning the Count's mother, grandfather, and great grandfather, all of them art collectors, and concluding with the words: "Happy he who will purchase any number of fragments of this great ensemble; after they have left the de la Béraudière mansion, they will carry with them the true stamp of taste, and their provenance will call upon them forever the attention and appreciation of all true connoisseurs."

The collection of Comte Jacques de la Béraudière was so extensive that large portions were not included in the 1885 auction, but passed directly to his heirs. Many pieces remained in his son's possession. Such is the origin of the works of art now offered to the American public.

The Comtesse Marie-Thérèse de la Béraudière, the present owner of this last portion of a great family art collection, is herself a collector of no mean distinction. To the art treasures she has received from the de la Béraudière family she has added several valuable pieces, purchased by herself out of other well-known collections; the provenance of these has been carefully stated in the catalogue. For a number of years, her collection has been housed in her beautiful Paris home near the Parc Monceau. She has received the visits of many distinguished art historians such as the late Dr. Bode, Monsieur Salomon Reinach, Dr. Max J. Friedlaender, and Dr. August L. Mayer; the latter has described in the Pantheon several of her more important pictures. It is now some time since I have had the opportunity of studying the de la Béraudière collection, but it is a real pleasure for me to testify to its great artistic and historical interest, to the taste and knowledge of its previous owners, and to the keenness and judgment of the Comtesse de la Béraudière; that these beautiful works of art have now left Paris is the cause of much regret in all French artistic circles. In a certain measure, it really consoles us to know that in America they will receive full appreciation, be worthily housed, and carefully studied by young and enthusiastic art-historians; but after all is said and done, with the departure of the de la Béraudière collection, it is a little of Old Paris that passes away.

CONDITIONS OF SALE

1. All bids to be PER PIECE as numbered in the catalogue, unless otherwise mentioned.
2. The highest bidder to be the buyer. In all cases of disputed bids the lot shall be resold, but the auctioneer will use his judgment as to the good faith of all claims, and his decision shall be final.
3. Any bid which is not commensurate with the value of the article offered, or which is merely a nominal or fractional advance, may be rejected by the auctioneer if in his judgment such bid would be likely to affect the sale injuriously.
4. The name of the buyer of each lot shall be given immediately after the sale thereof, and when so required, each buyer shall sign a card giving the lot number, amount for which sold, and his or her name and address. ¶ A deposit at the actual time of the sale shall be made of all or such part of the purchase prices as may be required. ¶ If the two foregoing conditions are not complied with, the lot or lots so purchased may at the option of the auctioneer be put up again and resold.
5. Title passes upon the fall of the auctioneer's hammer, and thereafter the property is at the purchaser's risk, and neither the owner nor the Company is responsible for the loss of, or any damage to any article by theft, fire, breakage, however occasioned, or any other cause whatsoever.
6. Articles not paid for in full and not called for by the purchaser by noon of the day following that of the sale may be turned over by the Company to some carter to be carried to and stored in some warehouse until the time of the delivery therefrom to the purchaser, and the cost of such cartage and storage and any other charges will be charged against the purchaser, and the risk of loss or damage occasioned by such removal or storage will be upon the purchaser. ¶ In any instance where the bill has not been paid in full by noon of the day following that of the sale, the Company reserves the right, any other stipulation in these conditions of sale to the contrary notwithstanding, in respect to any or all lots included in the bill, at its option, either to cancel the sale thereof or to resell the same at public or private sale without further notice for the account of the buyer and to hold the buyer responsible for any deficiency sustained in so doing.
7. The Company exercises great care to catalogue every lot correctly and endeavors therein and also at the actual time of the sale to point out any error, defect, or imperfection, but guaranty is not made either by the owner or the Company of the correctness of the description, genuineness, authenticity or condition of any lot, and no sale will be set aside on account of any incorrectness, error of cataloguing or imperfection not noted or pointed out. Every lot is sold "as is" and without recourse.
8. Buying or bidding by the Company for responsible parties on orders transmitted to it by mail, telegraph, or telephone, if conditions permit, will be faithfully attended to without charge. Any purchases so made will be subject to the foregoing conditions of sale. Orders for execution by the Company should be given with such clearness as to leave no room for misunderstanding. Not only should the lot number be given, but also the name of the object, and a bid on several objects catalogued under a single number should be stated to be so much per piece unless the description contains the notation "[Lot.]", in which case the bid should be stated to be so much FOR THE LOT. If the one transmitting the order is unknown to the Company, a deposit must be sent or reference submitted. Shipping directions should also be given.

9. The Company will afford every facility for the employment of carriers and packers by the purchasers, but will not be responsible for any damage arising from the acts of such carriers and packers.

These Conditions of Sale cannot be altered except by an Officer of the Company

FOREWORD

THE famous bust of the Comtesse de Sabran, by Houdon [No. 448], which is remarkable for its vitality and the plastic rhythm of its modeling, is the chef d'oeuvre of this collection. It is an amazing tribute to one of the most romantic personalities of the eighteenth century and illustrates the remarkable flair for portraiture possessed by the master who announced as his canon: "One of the finest attributes of the difficult art of sculpture is to preserve the truthfulness of form, and to render almost imperishable the image of those who have contributed either to the glory or to the happiness of their country."

The bust is sculptured in Seravezza marble, Houdon's favorite medium, and has acquired a beautifully patinated surface, which gathers light and shade and exhibits to perfection its subtleties of line; it dates from about the year 1785 and comes from the collections of the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Russia and of M. Henri Piazza of Paris. The work was shown in the Houdon Centenary Exhibition of 1928 in Paris and is fully described and illustrated in the authoritative catalogue raisonné of Giacometti.

The one hundred and sixty pictures of the collection will be dispersed in the two evening sessions, and it is impossible here to do more than review some few of the more noteworthy paintings. The early panels range from a fifteenth century altarpiece of the Catalan school to the masterly Virgin and the Man of Sorrows [No. 296] of Dirck Bouts from the Raffaele collection, composed perhaps for a stained glass window, with its virile severity of handling; an elegant Portrait of a Lady [No. 268] belongs to the Clouet group, and a genre piece by Marinus van Reymer-swale The Money Lenders [No. 302], with its wealth of detail, recalls the animated interiors with figures by Hans Holbein and his followers.

Concerning the great work of Brueghel the Elder, The Sermon On The Mount [No. 305], we may direct attention to the opinion of M. de Coninck of Brussels, embodied in a footnote discussing the several variations of this subject, in which he comes to the conclusion, fully endorsed by us, that the Béraudière panel outranks the best and may even possibly represent the long lost prototype of these paintings. The composition, with the astonishing skill of his handling of the crowd groups and the dissection of their varied types, is characteristic of the highly subjective art of one of the most perspicuous visionaries in the history of painting.

Two important gallery group portraits of the seventeenth century are outstanding. The Cabinet of the Duque d'Olivares [No. 309] is a composition of four figures of Spanish statesmen, rendered with a skill in differentiation demonstrative of the fine invention of Velasquez in his early period. The masterly group, The Family of Dr. Tulp [No. 304], given to Barendt Fabritius, depicts the famous surgeon of The Anatomy Lesson and was formerly in the collection of H. M. King Leopold I of the Belgians; the fine brushwork and subtle lighting of the group have suggested to Dr. August L. Mayer the work of a master of the coterie of Thomas de Keyser.

The superlative portrait of Seigneur van Diemen de Arkel [No. 53], by the rare master Iyaak Luttichuys [1616-1673], is a strikingly effective work recalling Vermeer. Painted before a brilliant green drapery, the head is presented in a softly diffused light modulating the harshness of the flesh tones and the over-clarity of contours and blending the whole into a sensuous portrait which can bear comparison with the finest works of the genius of Delft.

Examples of the eighteenth century include a distinguished military portrait [No. 54] by Goya, authenticated by Sr. de Beruete of the Museo Nacional and shown at the Goya Exposition at the Prado; a beautiful English portrait study of Miss Chambers [No. 51] by Romney exhibits the great charm and rapid draughtsmanship of this facile artist. An original pastel portrait [No. 292] by Cotes, in a beautiful carved and gilded frame, was among the masterpieces of the English Pastellists Exposition at Paris in 1911.

The French schools are very completely represented. We note a small grotesque painting by Chardin [No. 274], Le Singe Antiquaire, a delicately rendered miniature portrait of Mlle. du They [No. 264] by the romantic painter Schall, acquired from Thomas Agnew and Sons together with the portrait of La Princesse du Rohan [No. 289] given to Nattier. Other paintings of exceptional merit from the brilliant coterie of artists of the courts of Louis XV and Louis XVI include Le Moulin [No. 49] of François Boucher from the Michel-Lévy sale, La Mésaventure de Village [No. 52] by Deshayes with all the dramatic brilliance of his master, the portrait of the maturing Pompadour [No. 290] by Lancret, and characteristic portraits by Vigée-Lebrun, Greuze, Largillière, Drouais, Van Loo, Boilly, and Perronneau (the last a rare painting in oils signed by the famous pastellist).

The second and fourth sessions of the sale contain a small but interesting collection of eighteenth century French furniture with a number of signed examples by the ébénistes of the period, of which the finest is a superb marqueterie kidney table [No. 447] with the poinçon of P. Roussel (M.E. 1745); sculptures (including a St. Sebastian by El Greco), decorative objects, and a great number of unusual bibelots. We would like to direct attention to the rare assortment of early steel and iron keys and snuffers [Nos. 81-109] and the excellence of the many carved frames collected by the Comtesse, some of which will be offered separately, while the majority enhance in a large measure the decorative quality of both the greater and the lesser paintings.

51. PORTRAIT OF MISS CHAMBERS

Brilliant head-and-shoulders portrait to half-left of a young girl with exquisite features, gray eyes, and scarlet lips, her light brown hair loosely draped; robed in a white dress roughed in before a brown background.

Remounted canvas: Height, 23½ inches; width, 17½ inches

Painted about 1793

Collection of Mrs. Beatrix Charlton, London

Note: This picture has been authenticated by the English expert, William Roberts, in the following terms: "This is a lovely study in oils by George Romney of a beautiful woman, Miss Chambers. It will be seen from my Catalogue Raisonné of Romney, p. 27, that a Miss Chambers of 36 Welbeck Street, London, (afterwards the wife of John Herbert Foley, Esq. of Ridgway, Pembrokeshire) sat to Romney in 1792-4, for a Kitcat portrait (36 in. by 28 in.) which was not traced up to 1904. This portrait has since come to light and is now in the United States; it is totally different in scheme and pose from the present head and shoulders, but the two were evidently done at about the same period. There are 14 sittings of Miss Chambers recorded in Romney's diaries; and it is certain that he made several studies for the portrait, before he arrived at the manner in which his sitter elected to have the portrait finally done. The present head and shoulders is probably one of those done in 1792. It is in perfect condition and I have rarely seen a more perfect or a more desirable study in oils by this great portrait painter."

Note: This picture has been authenticated by M. E. de Coninck of Brussels, who writes in part as follows (translation): "The original of this important composition is by Pieter Brueghel the Elder; according to the legend the original has disappeared, and certain historians believe that its disappearance was due to a fire which took place in the studio of Rubens. . . . Several variations, more or less good in quality and from the atelier of the Brueghels, exist; the Antwerp Museum possesses one of inferior quality.

"The Brueghel of the Béraudière collection is of exceptional quality, is in remarkable preservation, and is signed.

"Have we here the prototype of this important composition? It is permissible to suppose so. . . .

"It will remain my belief, until the time when I am shown the same composition in a painting of superior technique to the present one, that this picture is by the hand of the master, and is perhaps the original prototype."

H. Webster, Le Chevalier de Boufflers, 1916, passim.

Sculptured about 1785

Collection of H. I. H. the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Russia

Collection of M. Henri Piazza, Paris

Exposition du Centenaire de Houdon, Paris, 1928, No. 64, illustrated in the catalogue

Described and illustrated in G. Giacometti, La Vie et L'Oeuvre de J. A. Houdon, Vol. II, pp. 140-141 and plate

Described by Louis Réau and illustrated in the Gazette des Beaux Arts, June, 1928, p. 349

Described and illustrated in L'Illustration and in La France Illustré, June, 1928, and in La Renaissance, July, 1928

Note: We extract from the work of M. Georges Giacometti (op. cit., p. 140) the following: The only previous example known of this bust was one in terra cotta in the Neues Palast, Berlin. The present bust is executed in Seravezza marble, Houdon's favorite medium, and comes from the collection of the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Russia; it was probably executed at the beginning of the reign of Louis XVI (or at least in the early years of the reign), perhaps about 1785, at which period Mme. de Sabran was still only a countess. The present model is a more tenderly wrought work than the terra cotta bust, with numerous differences in the drapery, the arrangement of the hair and the movement in the ribbons knotting the curls at the back of the head. He adds (translation): "This bust may be considered, with good reason, a chef d'œuvre of the art of portraiture. It is notable for the disposition of the accessories, which are of the simplest kind, and allow the observation to play upon the real portrait, that is, the faithful reproduction of the features from the physical point of view and the interpretation of the spiritual being in the expression of the countenance. Considered in these two aspects, the bust is of the first rank, and an attentive examination reveals to us in so great a degree the science and skill that the sculptor brought to the execution of the portrait, that he seems to have liberated under his chisel, in some way, the esoteric spirit of the sitter. The suppleness and marvelous delicacy of the modeling contribute to this impression, and give the work a close resemblance to the charming portrait by Mme. Vigée-LeBrun."

Réau writes (loc. cit.): "One of the most spiritual busts is that of the Comtesse de Sabran . . . The physiognomy of this charming woman . . . is sparkling with intelligence and wit and one may comprehend the power she wielded over Prince Henry of Prussia and the Chevalier de Boufflers, with whom she exchanged delightful love letters."
